Adam Matthew getting started

Before you start researching on your chosen AM resource you might want to look at the introductory pages. If you want to get to know the resource a little bit better you can take a tour, this will introduce you to the different areas of the resource such as documents, essays or my archive.

Alternatively the nature and scope page will give you a brief introduction to the types of material in the resource, as well as the sections and themes. If you're interested in the source of the material look at the participating libraries page to see which libraries and archives have contributed to this resource.

Each of our resources has a carefully selected academic board who helps select material and contribute towards the features of the resource, you can see the full editorial board by clicking here
