Championing digital stewardship

Nothing can replace the materiality of primary sources, and support for your special collections departments remains essential to us and our mission, as for yours. Yet our very identity as a scholarly publisher is linked to the wonderful transformative potential that comes when you apply technology to the artefacts of knowledge.

AM have long been in the process of technological transformation, taking as we do the material objects authored by humans of our past and transforming them into digital images which have a second life for research and for contemporary understanding.
